

BOMBING KILLS 31 IN JOHNSON COUNTY REFUGEE CENTER

DFW News, DFW, CAS

An explosion yesterday in the Johnson County Refugee Center has resulted in the deaths of 31 refugees. The cause of the explosion is unknown. Rumors that the accident was caused by a deliberate explosion can not be confirmed.

Even so, Emiliano Quesada of the Aztlan Freedom League, was quick to attribute the accident to terrorism, "This is yet another attack on Aztlaners, another in an increasing wave of racially motivated terrorism. One which the authorities continue to refuse to do anything about. At least a dozen people died that could have been easily saved if Fort Bush had been willing to provide any medical support."

While authorities admit that there has been a slight uptick in attacks against Aztlaner refugees in recent mont

> Okay, I can't take it anymore. Who is the idiot that wrote this?

An explosion yesterday in the Johnson County Slum killed at least 31 people, and maimed and wounded at least a hundred more. The cause of the explosion was a truck filled with ammonium nitrate detonated by a lunatic that hated Aztlaners so much that she was willing to kill herself in order to murder some. Rumors that the accident was caused by a deliberate explosion can easily be confirmed by doing the absolute minimum of investigation.

Even so, A justifiably furious Emiliano Quesada of the Aztlan Freedom League was quick to point out the fragging obvious. "This is yet another attack on Aztlaners, another in an increasing wave of racially motivated terrorism. One which the authorities continue to refuse to do anything about. At least a dozen people died that could have been easily saved if Fort Bush had been willing to provide any medical support." Fort Bush was too busy using the refugee camp as a target for artillery practice to provide any assistance.

While authorities desperately avoiding doing their fragging jobs admit that there has been a significant uptick in attacks against Aztlaner refugees in recent months, the baseline rate is so high that it really doesn't make much difference. "Why should I care about people that don't vote for me? A lot of them have tusks and brown skin, so they don't really count as people."

> There, fixed it.
> Whitehat

> I actually know the idiot who wrote this, and he's furious. Apparently, your "edits" are pretty close to what he originally submitted, but his editors chose to "make the article less inflammatory". He'd quit, but he needs the nuyen.
> Nocrimo

RUGBY AUSTRALIA CHIEF EXECUTIVE RESIGNS

BBC News Australia, Sydney

Rugby Australia chief executive Raelene Castle has resigned after 10 former Wallabies captains signed a letter demanding a change in leadership. Castle said she believes the board no longer wanted her in the role.

She steps down amid a financial crisis in Australian rugby union that has been compounded by the VITAS outbreak that has struck Perth and Melbourne has halted many of the games. "It has been made clear to me that the board believes my no longer being the CEO would help give them the clear air they believe they need," Castle said. "The game is bigger than any one individual – so I told the chair (Paul McLean) that I would resign from the role."

Nick Farr-Jones, the captain of the 2011 World Cup-winning team, and George Gregan were among the 10 ex-skipper to sign the letter. Michael Lynagh was originally among the signatories but withdrew his support.

Rugby Australia and the players' union had also agreed to a 40% average pay cut for the country's 292 professionals up to the end of September to keep the sport afloat.

Castle became only the third woman to lead any of Australia's major rugby or football codes when she took the role in December 2017.

She faced criticism for her handling of the sacking of Wallabies full-back Israel Folau last year, as well as the failure to agree a new TV broadcast deal.

Australia were knocked out by England in the quarter-finals of last year's men's World Cup.

> Why the frag is this showing up in my news feed? Do I give two hoops about Australia? Rugby? Australian Rugby?!?!
> SithDog2057
> The Minds that filter our perceptions are wise beyond our understanding.
> Raven
> The classic explanation - it's a feature, not a bug!
> Raven